ABSTRACT

This publication on women's centers provides a brief overview, information sources on women's centers, a listing by state of women's centers, and a listing and description of centers for research on women. It updates a 1975 listing of women's centers and focuses primarily on campus women's centers, as well as some community women's centers and organizations that may have some link with a college community. YWCA student associations are also included. The degree of diversity among the centers is striking, but all attempt to provide services for and about women. Some centers are highly academic, others are service-oriented, and others are primarily concerned with social and political change. Some focus on serving the typical (18-22-year-old) undergraduate woman, while others focus on serving faculty, staff, community, or re-entry women. Their activities are varied and include services such as counseling, continuing education, workshops, women's studies classes, resource centers, and child care. (SW)

WOMEN'S CENTERS: WHERE ARE THEY?

REVISED: FALL 1979

Women's Centers: Where Are They? updates and expands the Project's September 1975 listing of women's centers.

Women's centers have become increasingly common on campuses and in communities in all parts of the country. The degree of diversity among the centers is striking, yet all share one common link: each is somehow attempting to provide services for and about women. Some centers are highly academic, others are service-oriented, and still others are primarily concerned with social and political change. Some focus on serving the "typical" (18-22 year-old) undergraduate women, while others focus on serving faculty, staff, community, or re-entry women. A few have substantial budgets, while others have no budget at all. Their activities are varied and include services such as counseling, continuing education, workshops, women's studies classes, resource centers, and child care. Some are multi-purpose while others focus on a single issue such as re-entry programs or fine arts. Just as the nature of the student body changes from year to year, the focus, size and scope of a particular campus women's center may vary according to student interest and need.

This listing focuses primarily on campus women's centers. Additionally, it includes some community women's centers and organizations which may have some link with a college community. These centers are marked with an asterisk. When there was doubt concerning whether or not a given organization should be listed, it was generally included.

In addition, YWCA Student Associations are included. Historically each community and state YWCA has been a women's center, and continues to be such. Many YWCA's provide information services, referrals, support groups for specific groups of women, and special program activities for women with particular needs—such as single parents, teenage mothers, and re-entry women.

Several major types of programs or organizations which might be conceivably called "women's centers" are underrepresented in this list—continuing education programs and Associations of Women Students (AWS). We have deliberately omitted women's studies programs. Information concerning these activities/organizations is available from other sources:

- Catalyst National Network of Local Resource Centers (revised June 1979) provides a state-by-state listing of local resource centers for adult women, including the center's activities. Copies are available free from Catalyst, 14 East 60th Street, New York, NY 10022. (212) 759-9700. (A list of other publications is available from the same address.)
- Women's Studies Programs is a list of individual women's studies programs compiled annually as an educational service of the Women's Studies Newsletter and the National Women's Studies Association (NWSA). The list cites mostly interdisciplinary programs and, where possible, the type of degree available. Copies are available free from both the Women's Studies Newsletter, Box 334, Old Westbury, NY 11568 and NWSA, 4102 Foreign Languages Building, University of Maryland, College Park, MD 20742.
- Women's Action Almanac, a resource guide published in 1979 by the Women's Action Alliance, is a 448-page reference handbook on women's issues and programs which also contains a list of women's centers. The almanac is available at $7.95 prepaid plus postage and handling from the Women's Action Alliance, 370 Lexington Ave., New York, NY 10017. Quantity discounts are also available.
- Information concerning Associations of Women Students can be obtained by writing to the Intercollegiate Association of Women Students, Box 2, 2401 Virginia Ave, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037.

Several other publications concerning women's centers are of special interest:

- Developing Women's Programs and Developing and Negotiating Budgets for Women's Programs were developed by the National Women's Centers Training Project, Everywoman's Center, the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. They describe the process of development and implementation of

The Project on the Status and Education of Women of the Association of American Colleges provides information concerning women in education, and works with institutions, government agencies and other associations and programs related to women in higher education. Funded by Carnegie Corporation of New York and The Ford Foundation, the Project develops and distributes free materials which identify and highlight issues and federal policies affecting women's status as students and employees. Publication of these materials does not necessarily constitute endorsement by AAC, Carnegie Corporation of New York or The Ford Foundation. This paper may be reproduced in whole or in part without permission, provided credit is given to the Project on the Status and Education of Women, Association of American Colleges, 1818 R Street, NW, Washington, DC 20009 (202) 387-1300. All requests for copies should be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

women's programs, alternative methods for establishing a program, and ways to find and manage funding. Copies are available at $2.25 a set from Educational Development Center, 39 Chapel Street, Newton, MA 02160.

- Feminist Resources for Schools and Colleges: A Guide for Curricular Materials was revised and expanded in 1977 to include more than 500 sources. The 67-page annotated bibliography has a section on higher education resources and anthologies as well as pamphlets, articles, audio-visual and other materials for teachers and students, preschool to post-graduate. Available at $2.95 from The Feminist Press, Old Westbury, NY 11568.
- "Women's Centers at the University of Texas/Arlington: A Model for Growth" describes three collaborating centers (the Center for Women's Studies, the Women's Center, and Transitions: Displaced Homemakers) which currently exist on one universty campus. While all three centers are involved in women's education, each addresses a different need and uses different methods to achieve the goal of helping women. Written by Jeanne Ford with Barbara Brown, the article appears in Women's Studies Newsletter, Spring, 1979, Volume VII, Number 2, page 20.

Additionally, there has been an increased interest in "men's centers" on campus and in communities. The following resources and publications are especially informative:

- Men's Studies Bibliography (third revision—1977) contains approximately 1,100 citations divided into subject areas including employment, socialization, relationships and attitudes toward women and the men's liberation movement. A list of books providing an overview of current research in these and other areas is also available. Copies are available at $2 prepaid from the Human Studies Collection, MIT Humanities Library, Cambridge, MA 02139.

Women's Centers: Where Are They? is based largely upon a list compiled by Joanne Horn Rettke, Henrietta Augustus Harris, and the staff at the Women's Resource Center, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan. Without their efforts, this list could not have been assembled. We also thank Kathryn Girard and the staff at the Women's Center Training Project of the Women's Educational Equity program at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst for providing assistance, and Elaine Reuben, Coordinator of the National Women's Studies Association who supplied additions and corrections to this list. Additionally, the listing of local resource centers compiled and distributed by Catalyst, and described above, was used as a resource. This paper could not have been prepared without the extensive help of Allie Lyons, a student intern with the Project from Connecticut College.

We encourage anyone who has additions or corrections to this listing to send them to the Project on the Status and Education of Women, Association of American Colleges, 1818 R Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009.

project on the status and education of women

CENTERS FOR RESEARCH ON WOMEN

The following list was initially compiled by Mariam Chamberlain of The Ford Foundation in connection with a conference on women's research centers. It first appeared in Ms. magazine, September 1979, and has subsequently been updated by Chamberlain.

1. Southwest Institute for Research on Women (SIROW)
University of Arizona
Tucson, Arizona 85724
Director: Myra Dinnerstein

The Southwest Institute for Research on Women is a newly formed regional center designed to serve as a resource to promote and facilitate research on women by scholars in Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, and Utah. Its purposes are to organize seminars and workshops to promote interdisciplinary and collaborative work and to set research priorities for the region; provide a central clearinghouse for information on research projects and to publish a newsletter to disseminate the information; provide opportunities for younger scholars, including graduate students; to pursue research on women by offering them access to resources not available at their own campus and contact with scholars throughout the region; and bring to the Institute noted scholars to present their research findings and to work with scholars in the region with similar interests.

2. The Center for Continuing Education of Women
(CCEW-Women's Center)
University of California, Berkeley
T-9 Building
Berkeley, California 94720
Director: Margaret B. Wilkerson

The CCEW-Women's Center is an academic unit on the Berkeley campus designed to expand educational opportunities for women. Established in 1972, the Women's Center is funded by the University and is mandated to aid the academic development of women in the campus community by taking action in three areas: research, information and resources, and resource development.

The Center stimulates and disseminates research by women and men in the academic community through the sponsorship of major research conferences. "A Second Look," a weekly lecture series, provides a forum for faculty to discuss with students their current research.

The Center has a strong student service component which offers academic programs designed to aid the intellectual development of women and to help them assess career options.

Finally, the Women's Center works to energize University resources on behalf of all women in the University community and to sensitize the campus to the concerns of women. The Center staff works closely with departments to define the problems of women students, and collaborates with faculty committees attempting to improve the quality of life on the campus for students, staff and faculty.

3. Center for Women Policy Studies
2000 P Street, N.W., Suite 508
Washington, D.C. 20036
Director: Jane R. Chapman

The Center for Women Policy Studies does extensive and detailed work in three main areas: (a) The economic status of women, including studies of credit; the legal and economic impact of marital status (right-to-support, domicile, alimony, child support, inheritance tax, no-fault divorce); and sex discrimination in the social security system; (b) women and criminal justice, including survey of rape victim assistance nationwide; policy and program development for victims of intrafamily violence and sexual assault; and programming for female offenders; and (c) employment discrimination, particularly in policing and the military.

The Project on the Status and Education of Women of the Association of American Colleges provides information concerning women in education, and works with institutions, government agencies and other associations and programs related to women in higher education. Funded by Carnegie Corporation of New York and The Ford Foundation, the Project develops and distributes free materials which identify and highlight issues and federal policies affecting women's status as students and employees. Publication of these materials does not necessarily constitute endorsement by AAC, Carnegie Corporation of New York or The Ford Foundation. This paper may be reproduced in whole or in part without permission, provided credit is given to the Project on the Status and Education of Women, Association of American Colleges, 1818 R Street, NW, Washington, DC 20009 (202) 387-1300. All requests for copies should be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

4. Center for the Study of Women and Sex Roles
CUNY Graduate School and University Center
33 West 42nd Street
New York, N.Y. 10036
Co-Directors: Susan Saegert, Mary Brown Parlee

The Center for the Study of Women and Sex Roles is set up to foster a high level of interdisciplinary, scholarly research and graduate education and to facilitate the growth of knowledge in this area through conferences, seminars, lectures, and course work. Its research and course-related interests include the psychology of sex roles, cross-cultural studies of sex-role learning, the role of women and the law, women's history, sex biases and stereotypes in education, and women in the arts.

5. Institute for Education and Research on Women and Work
Cornell University
New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations
Metropolitan District
7 East 43rd Street
New York, New York 10017
Director: Barbara M. Wertheimer

The Institute for Education and Research on Women and Work is concerned with problems related to blue-collar and trade-union women, and is the only center with this orientation. It has a strong education and training component, focusing on applied research and the development of programs that help working women attain their educational and career goals and assume leadership positions in the labor and community organizations to which they belong. The Center publishes materials and maintains a clearinghouse of information and library about working women.

6. Program in Sex Roles and Social Change
Columbia University
Center for the Social Sciences
420 West 118th Street
New York, New York 10027
Co-directors: Jonathan R. Cole, Cynthia F. Epstein

The Program in Sex Roles and Social Change encourages and facilitates empirical research among social scientists in four main areas: the labor force, the family, the law, and higher education. It has a special interest in two emerging areas in the sex-roles field: international comparisons and the interaction between social science research and the law. The Center's activities have stimulated interdisciplinary communication among scholars within the university community, and plans include expansion of this network to the larger intellectual community of New York.

7. Center for the American Woman and Politics (CAWP)
Eagleton Institute of Politics
Rutgers University
New Brunswick, New Jersey 08903
Director: Ruth B. Mandel

The Center for the American Woman and Politics specializes in research about women's participation in the U.S. political process and is the only research, education, and service center of its kind. Its purpose is to develop useful information about women's political participation and to assist efforts to increase women's effective involvement in public life. Activities include studies of the status, problems, and trends of women's participation; seminars, workshops, and courses designed to examine, encourage, and assist women in politics; collection and dissemination of facts, figures, reports, and analyses about women's public roles; and conferences and symposia to stimulate research and the exchange of ideas among academicians and practitioners.

8. Higher Education Research Institute (HERI)
924 Westwood Boulevard, Suite 850
Los Angeles, California 90024
Vice President: Helen S. Astin

The Higher Education Research Institute carries out empirical research in all sectors of postsecondary education, emphasizing the broad areas of academic administration and institutional management, federal and state financial aid programs, the use of education in careers, and educational equity for women. Because it is concerned with the development and utilization of talent, the Institute focuses a part of its research on the relationship of postsecondary education to the labor market and on improved job-market forecasting. The Institute encourages multidisciplinary interchange and variety in research modes and has a particular expertise in research that utilizes a longitudinal approach.

9. International Center for Research on Women
1010 16th Street, N.W., Third Floor
Washington, D.C. 20036
Acting President: Mayra Buvinic

The International Center for Research on Women is one of two international centers concerned with the impact of the development process on the roles and status of women. The Center conducts work aimed at not only understanding and improving the lives of women in developing countries, but accelerating the socioeconomic development of those countries by including women as active participants. Projects range from research on poverty as a women's issue and the impact of migration on family structures to women-headed households and the conditions of rural women in several countries.

10. International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women

Office of the Assistant Secretary-General
Center for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs
One United Nations Plaza, Room DC-1026
New York, New York 10017
Social Affairs Officer: Danielle Bazin

The International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women promotes the goals of the United Nations Decade for Women through research, training, and the collection and exchange of documentation/information within the context of national, regional, and international plans of action. The Institute works closely with intergovernmental, governmental, and nongovernmental agencies with similar aims, and with the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women.

11. Research Institute on Women's Public Lives

Wescoe Hall
University of Kansas
Lawrence, Kansas 66045
Director: Janet Sharistanian

The Research Institute on Women's Public Lives is a newly formed regional center which has grown out of a strong women's studies program and extensive library holdings about women at the University. Initial activities are focused on a conference on research about the education of women and a 1980 summer institute on "Women's Public Lives." This theme is broadly construed to include all activities outside the home such as in politics, education and volunteer work.

12. Center for Continuing Education for Women (CCEW)

University of Michigan
328-330 Thompson Street
Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109
Director: Jean W. Campbell

The University of Michigan Center for Continuing Education of Women has three inter-related functions: service, advocacy, and research. Since 1964, the Center has offered a wide range of direct and indirect services to help women (and men) whose education is or may be complicated by family and/or the need to work. It has advocated for individual students and for more sensitive institutional responses throughout the schools and departments of the University. To some extent it has had an impact on other institutions of its kind.

The research function has developed naturally from the fact that intake and first interview information has been coded for women coming to the Center since the beginning. The Center research program is currently focusing on the transition to work, the balancing of work and family commitments, and the impact on well-being across the age groupings of 1,135 women who came to the Center from 1964 to 1973. Special studies of achievement orientation in young mothers, of women in sciences and mathematics, and of the educational choices of older women are examples of current graduate student use of Center data. Center data are used not only for research but as a basis for planning and program development.

13. Institute for Social Research

University of Michigan
Panel Study of Income Dynamics
Institute for Social Research
Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106
Director: James N. Morgan

The Institute for Social Research's Panel Study of Income Dynamics is an extensive investigation of the causes and consequences of people's changing economic fortunes over time. The Study follows 5,000 families (17,000 individuals), shedding light on a variety of social issues relating to women's family roles. Findings over the nine years so far have been presented in six volumes of interest to economists, demographers, sociologists, social policy makers, and others interested in poverty, job discrimination, and the social economics of the American family.

14. Center for Human Resource Research

Ohio State University
National Longitudinal Surveys of Labor Force Behavior (NLS)
Columbus, Ohio 43201
Director: Herbert S. Parnes

The Center for Human Resource Research is concerned with a wide range of contemporary problems associated with human resource development, conservation, and utilization, and has acquired pre-eminence in the fields of labor market research and manpower planning. The largest project of the Center, the National Longitudinal Surveys of Labor Force Behavior, has been conducted since 1965 for the Department of Labor. Sample data are collected on a continuing basis for four age-sex subsets of the U.S. population as of 1965: men 45-59 years of age, women 30-44 years of age, and young men and women 14-24. Monographs and special reports, as well as data tapes for public use, are available from this data.

15. Henry A. Murray Research Center
Radcliffe College
77 Brattle Street
Cambridge, Massachusetts 02138
Director: Abigail J. Stewart

The Henry A. Murray Research Center of Radcliffe College is a national repository for social science data on the changing life experiences of American women, designed to serve as a catalyst and sponsor for scholarly research on the impact of social change on women's lives. Selected existing research in the fields of psychology, sociology, political science, and economics, spanning the period from World War II to the present, has been collected and is available for further analysis. Acquisition of data is a continuing process, as are special programs in cooperation with researchers and scholars.

16. Institute for Case Development and Research
Simmons College
Graduate Programs in Management
409 Commonwealth Avenue
Boston, Massachusetts 02215
Director: Jeanne D. Stanton

The Institute for Case Development and Research exists primarily to develop teaching cases which focus on women managers for use in graduate management programs. In addition to illustrating administrative problems, these new cases show how women deal with career problems and how their attitudes, backgrounds, and managerial styles differ from those of male managers. They also provide role models for pioneering women management students. Based on a published collection of cases, the Institute will conduct summer institutes to expose other faculty to the Simmons cases and provide instruction in case method teaching.

17. Center for Research on Women (CROW)
Stanford University
Polya Hall
Stanford, California 94305
Director: Myra Strober

The Center for Research on Women sponsors research undertaken by Stanford faculty on the changing roles of women and men within their own disciplines and in interdisciplinary teams, and facilitates the sharing of findings with students and interested members of the wider community. The research program includes research scholars, seed money research grants, the Center's group activities, research seminars, and a research conference. A major study under way is concerned with the biology and psychology of sex differences. The educational program includes course development, a lecture series, and other public events.

18. Program of Policy Research on Women and Families
Urban Institute
2100 M Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20037
Director: June A. O'Neill

The Program of Policy Research on Women and Families represents a significant extension of the research agenda of the Institute to cover new developments in sex roles and life styles. Objectives are to analyze and interpret ongoing changes in women's aspirations and status and the implications of these changes for individuals and social institutions; to identify and anticipate the range of public policy options for responding to these changes; and to provide a conceptual and factual basis for choosing among the alternatives. Projects range from the tax treatment of two-earner families to the effects of recession on the employment of women and the need for new financial arrangements for the support of children in cases of divorce, separation, or out-of-wedlock birth.

19. Center for Research on Women
Wellesley College
828 Washington Street
Wellesley, Massachusetts 02181
Director: Carolyn M. Elliott

The Center for Research on Women works with Wellesley College and the Higher Education Resource Services (HERS) on innovative curriculum projects in higher education and with the Federation of Organizations for Professional Women in Washington on the planning and dissemination of research. Three main areas are addressed: employment, family and work, and higher education. Research is directed toward understanding the linkages between individuals and the functioning of institutions and social relationships. A central concern is to ensure that the results of research reach those who may act upon them.

20. Women's Studies Research Center
University of Wisconsin
Madison, Wisconsin 55706
Director: Elaine Marks

The Women's Studies Research Center maintains linkages with other centers and institutes on the Madison campus, with isolated scholars engaged in research on women, and with women's community groups and state agencies whose mission is to transform research into policy. Activities such as monthly colloquia, grant-writing competitions, and celebrations further these goals. Research efforts focus on four areas: women's studies pedagogy; the concept of motherhood; women and health; and theoretical and methodological debate between traditional approaches to the social sciences and humanities and more recent considerations of what constitutes knowledge and knowing.
